

Motorist Communications And Services: 4 Reports Prepared For The 52d Annual Meeting

BOX 4-5 (continued)

AHS and Land Use Conference, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, August 1996
Several commissioned papers were presented. These papers discussed automated highway systems and the local planning process, impacts on urban land use and metropolitan form, and the practical effects of automated highway systems on urban traffic patterns.

Downselect System Configurations Workshop, Minneapolis, Minnesota, September 1996
This workshop was designed to begin the process of refining AHS concept definitions. Attributes of alternative configurations were examined with respect to meeting stakeholder needs. Participants were more interested in discussing the value of automated highway systems in general than the relative value of alternative configurations. Developments in partial automation technologies also were of greater interest than the plan for full automation.

Joint Workshop on Liability Issues, Washington, D.C., February 1997
This 2-day workshop, cosponsored by the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, examined liability issues associated with automation of vehicles and highways. Federal and state transportation officials, vehicle and product manufacturers, and plaintiff and defense attorneys participated in an effort to identify critical liability issues that could hinder AHS development and deployment.

NAHSC Stakeholder Needs and Services Forum Report, Washington, D.C., June 1997
Conducted in conjunction with the ITS Annual Meeting, this workshop involved technical breakout sessions organized to explore the needs and perspectives of consumers, commercial vehicle operators, transit providers, and highway system operators. Crosscutting issues also were discussed.

(Designed as a preliminary assessment, the models assumed light-duty vehicle traffic only and no intermediate entrance and exit points between the origin and destination of traffic flows). Results from the models suggested that platooning vehicles operating on dedicated travel lanes offered the greatest potential for throughput gains (NAHSC 1997b, 3-4). The maximum throughput of platooned vehicles operating on dedicated lanes was found to
