SCALE OF THE EDUCATION
AND SKILLS AUTHORITY

RESEARCH AND LIBRARY
SERVICES

3. This briefing note is designed to provide information against which to benchmark the potential scale of the ESA. Strict comparisons of the size of education authorities within the UK and more widely are not possible for a number of reasons. These include the differing functions undertaken by authorities and the differing levels of education which they administer (e.g. nursery or higher education). For the purposes of enabling a broad comparison, a focus on the size of the school sector which falls within the authorities' remit is possible. This comparison will may produce different results however, depending on whether one considers school budgets, number of teaching staff, number of schools, number of pupils, or number of support staff (or any combination of these factors). As data is most readily available on number of schools falling within an authority's remit, this has been used as a basis upon which to make broad comparisons.
4. Comparison based on the number of schools falling within the remit of an authority indicates that under current proposals the ESA will become the largest education authority in the United Kingdom. It appears, however, that it will not be the largest education authority in Europe. At least in respect of some functions, France (a highly centralised state) and Catalonia (a region within Spain's devolved government system) appear to have larger authorities. In each of these two cases, however, geographic divisions exist within authorities in relation to a number of functions.

Northern Ireland

5. The Northern Ireland School Census 2005/06 reports that in Northern Ireland there are just over 1,300 schools (100 nursery schools, 900 primary schools, 17 preparatory departments of grammar schools, 230 post-primary schools, 45 special schools, 19 independent schools and 3 hospital schools).<sup>4</sup> These schools cater for around 200,000 pupils<sup>5</sup> with just over 19,000 full-time equivalent teaching posts.<sup>6</sup>

England and Scotland

6. In UK terms, the ESA, which will potentially have approximately 1,300 schools within its remit, will become the largest education authority. Administration of education in England and Scotland is a local government function. In England, Kent is the largest education authority with just over 700 schools<sup>7</sup> and 232,000 pupils.<sup>8</sup> In Scotland, Glasgow is the largest authority with just over 350 schools and just over 74,000 pupils.<sup>9</sup> Scotland no longer has a regional tier of local
