EXPLORING THE POSSIBILITY OF SULFUR DE-CONCENTRATE, POLYGENIC GOLD-GILGAR MINING AND INDUSTRIAL CO₂ BY ROASTING METHOD

ABSTRACT

Gilgar mining & industrial complex with more than 5.3 billion tons of iron ore in Iran, Kermanshah province and Southern of the city of Sirjan, is located in metamorphic complex of Gilgar. Because of the old geological age and multiple structural events, the genesis of the deposit is supposed to be polygenic. Due to increasing depth of mine, the geochemical geology of this iron ore has been changed a lot and the following of its mineralogical composition. Magnetite is the most economic mineral in this deposit and the waste mineral include sulfides such as Pyrite, Pyrrhotite, Chalcopyrite and etc. The produced concentrate of beneficiation plant has grade of Fe = 66.7 and S = 2.1 and is difficult to present to steel industry raw material market. Considering the complexity in mineralogy, using of the roasting technology is likely to be one of the immediate solutions to reduce the involved effect of high grade of "S" in concentrate. Iron, the 3 minutes in the lab scale and less the 17 minutes in the pilot scale resulting in rotary kiln test and in temperature of 700 °C was proved to be sufficient time for reaching sulphur content of 0.7% in roasted product. In addition to 68.3% Fe content, lower particle size distribution, more gangue ability and considerable decrease in C-Mn content have been the result of effect of roasting and finally high grade concentrate would be result to be easily available in the market.
